

London, UK, September 2nd - I See Myself in Flowers is an exciting upcoming solo exhibition from artist Douglas Karson. With a focus on beauty, colour, space and our relationship to the temporal world, this collection spans a decade of regular study and examination. Exploring different techniques, methods and ideas for how to express the unique beauty of a flower is an ongoing joy.

The flower acts as a potent symbol of vibrancy. It's beauty of appearance and scent is astounding. Humans are not alone in appreciating the fantastic range that is the flower world. This drive towards beauty is an essential part of what it means to be alive and appreciate the world around us.

The title of the show, I See Myself in Flowers, comes from the artists keen self awareness that the in his life, the beauty that is life, inevitably deteriorates into decay. It's this shared experience of impermanence that makes us aware of our own battle with time and mortality. Someday, no matter how pert the rose, it too will lose its petals. Instead of lamenting the loss, Douglas aims to celebrate the moments of perfection which are all too rare in our lives.

Douglas Karson is a self taught, American born artist who currently lives with his wife and young child in Bristol, UK. An avid sportsman, raised in the Jewish tradition, but surrounded by racism and antiSemitism in the deep South of the US bible belt left him with a unique perspective on the world. His art practice is cross-disciplinary as a painter, writer, musician and producer, as he believes that all creativity comes from the same source. The act of creation has a core commonality that can bridge gaps in culture, age, sex, gender, or any other perceived divides.

His work has featured in international art publications such as CreativPaper, Art Reveal, and Average Art magazines and his works have been included in multiple group and open shows (most recently the Clifton Art Club Open Summer Show). He has also been shortlisted and longlisted for multiple major art prizes including the Columbia Threadneedle Figurative Art Prize, the Visual Art Open, and more.

This exhibition is an exciting moment for the artist. It is his first show organised by Everton Talker and first solo show in London since he relocated to Bristol. He is thrilled to have the opportunity to share works around a central theme and hopes that it will connect with your sense of self and act like a reminder of a time when everything was beautiful.
